About

HABITS OF HIGHLY EFFECTIVE IMPLANTOLOGY

Dental Implants are the nearest equivalent replacement to the natural tooth and are therefore a useful addition in the management of edentulous and partially edentulous patients. A number of implant-supported treatment options have been used successfully to replace a single tooth and multiple teeth, as well as a completely edentulous jaw. The goal of modern implant dentistry ensures the restoration must be surrounded by soft and hard tissue environment in harmony with the existing dentition. In recent years implant dentistry has been increasingly influenced by aesthetic considerations and the primary reason being patient's demands for natural appearing restorations. With the elevated expectations of patients, increased experience and knowledge regarding treatment planning, surgical procedures and prosthetic rehabilitation are necessary. This CDE will enlighten on the prerequisites for an effective implant practice.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Photography has always been an integral part of dentistry and its application in dental practice is simple, fast, and extremely useful in documentation. The importance of regular digital photography and documentation in the dental office cannot be understated. The many uses for documentation include publication, diagnosis and treatment planning, dental legal documentation, forensic documentation, insurance verification, patient education, marketing, and communication with laboratories, dental team members, and colleagues. With the proper training, techniques, equipment, and implementation, dental photography can significantly enhance the level of treatment provided. This CDE program aims to break the barrier and help you to include digital dental photography into your regular dental practice
